Two Cambridge Boys Drown In Silver Lake

The victims—Charles F. Collins, 16, and Robert O'Brien, 15 — came here to spend the holiday week-end at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins of Warren road, Silver Lake, with three other youths.

The two youths went out rowing Sunday night and at about 8:30 p.m. screams were heard from the lake. Donald Paine, one of the group at the Collins cottage and also from Cambridge, dove into the lake and swam out in the direction from which the screams were heard. He discovered the boat, upside down in the water, but in several dives failed to locate the youths. Exhausted, he swam to shore and an emergency call was sent to the police and fire departments.

Boats and canoes equipped with grappling irons were brought to the scene and several crews in charge of Deputy Chief Francis Hoban started dragging. At about 11 o'clock, Earl Evans of Medford and Duke Kadiac of South Tewksbury, recovered the bodies of the youths, locked in each others arms, about 100 feet from shore. The bodies were removed to the Cavanaugh funeral home where the medical examiner viewed them, and later they were taken to Cambridge.

The Reading fire department sent its floodlights to the scene and Mrs. Fred S. King of Parker ave., South Tewksbury, kept the workers warm with liberal quantities of hot cocoa.

Unsung Heroes of Medical Corps Play Vital Role

One of the most ticklish jobs which men of the U. S. army medical corps are called upon to undertake is the removal of wounded men from the inside of tanks. The method of this removal may mean life or death to the casualty. At the left you see trainees from the medical corps field service school at Carlisle, Pa., engaged in the task. The man has been successfully removed through the tank turret and is being placed on a stretcher atop the tank. At right you see a demonstration of a method of transforming a pair of skis into a smooth-running litter for transporting a wounded man over the snow.

Edith N. Rogers Bill For Fuel Administrator

Failing to secure action by the President to name a fuel czar to bring order out of the chaos, Congressman Edith Nourse Rogers of the Fifth Massachusetts District, has put before the House a bill that would create the office of administrator of petroleum. Authority would be given to institute a program relating to the production, transportation, distribution and sale of petroleum and products.

"Let's get rid of the confusion about gas, oil and coal which exists at the present time as a result of conflicting stories and statements every day by the numerous officials now supposed to be in charge of the situation" Mrs. Rogers urged the House.

"Heads of departments now invested with divided authority over the vital products so necessary to the health and comfort of our people have been issuing statements that only tend to confuse the public and becloud the situation" Mrs. Rogers continued. "Despite repeated appeals in Congress no administration action has been taken. The public, threatened one day with heatless homes and assured the next day that our baloonny forecasts are ridiculous, has become hopelessly confused.

"It is incredible to me" Mrs. Rogers said, "that nothing has been done thus far. A year ago when I suggested the use of tank cars they rather smiled at the suggestion and they be made ready for use. We now see thousands of tank cars being used satisfactorily.

"This is the only time in the history of our country when one section only has been rationed or restricted. It seems manifestly unfair. We should ration all sections."

Mrs. Rogers' statement and demand for legislative action came after weeks of constant work on the fuel oil situation. Despite some success in securing diversion of fuel shipments to the East and New England and some semblance of efficient use of the tank cars in the operations she feels that one fuel oil office, is necessary to solve the problem. She has remained steadfastly in the Capitol, making her way from office to office to gather in the loose ends under the divided authority that now exists. Her action in Congress comes from experience.

—A Victory supper was served last evening at the Congregational church by the L. B. S. Society. Plans are being completed for the annual fair which will be held on November 12 and 13. Mrs. J. Turner Hood, Jr., has charge of the calendar table, Mrs. Philip Buzzell in charge of the candy and Mrs. Edward Neilson and Mrs. Harold Melzar have charge of the tea table.

—Word has been received of the promotion of John Ritchie to the position of corporal in the Air Corps in Tennessee. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Ritchie of Columbia street.

CRACKING PLASTER

Question: I have three rooms where the plaster is cracked. In one room it is split at least one-quarter to three-eighths of an inch in width and runs the length of the room. In the other rooms, it is cracked where the walls and ceiling join. What should I use to plaster these cracks so they won't open again? I have used patching plaster, but it cracks open again.

Answer: If the cracks are wide-ened and cut back to the lath, then filled with a patching plaster, the repair may be permanent. When cutting out the crack the opening should be wider at the lath, so that the new plaster will lock itself in. Joint cracks in plaster might be successfully filled by removing the plaster at each side of the crack for a distance of about six inches. A strip of metal lath bent to fit the joint between wall and ceiling is then nailed on and the corner replastered.

Cold Floor.

Q: I have a small drug store with no basement, which I heat with an oil burner. The cement floor is always cold, no matter how warm the room is. How can this be corrected? Could the cold air be carried off with a chute going through the roof from the floor level?

A: Your best method would be to cover the present floor with waterproof felt stuck down with asphalt or tar, and with a wood floor laid on top. The new floor boards need not be nailed; they can be stuck down with "mastic," so that the head room will not be decreased. Your idea for getting rid of the cold air from the floor would not work.

Sewer Check.

Q: In order to prevent the backing up of the sewer in my basement during heavy rains, I plan to install a standpipe open at the top, and about four feet high. I am wondering if this would have the effect of placing a strain or pressure on the underground part of the sewer.

A: Instead of a standpipe, ask your plumber about a check-valve, which is intended for that particular purpose. It permits the normal flow of water from your drain pipes to the sewer, but prevents the flow of water in the opposite direction.

Rebuilding a Chimney.

Q: Can condensation be prevented in a chimney that is used for gas burning? Bricks are old and soft, and at the top are crumbling away from being soaked continually. I intend to rebuild from the attic floor up, next summer. What is the best method?

A: The chimney should be rebuilt from below the level of the attic floor. Use hard-burned bricks and include a good quality fireclay flue lining. Inform the gas company of what you intend to do, and get their advice.

Plywood Floor.

Q: My kitchen floor is plywood. The builder says it was well nailed, but to me it seems loose, with a vibration and knock. Should the floor have been glued down?

A: Plywood is not satisfactory as a flooring material, for the surface is likely to scuff and splinter with use. Gluing should not be necessary. It should be quite enough to nail the flooring solidly to the beams. Plywood is an excellent base for linoleum, and if properly laid there should be no trouble.

Kitchen Wallpaper.

Q: Can ordinary varnish will have a yellowish effect on the whites, but there are varieties of varnish that are nearly clear. Also, large paint stores should know of a kind of liquid wax intended for the protection of wallpaper which is practically colorless.

Sail on Rum

Virtually every navy in the world gives its sailors a daily ration of rum, wine or some other alcoholic drink, an exception being the United States navy, in which the practice was abolished in 1862. However, the American boys may have as many as a dozen cups of coffee a day, although their average consumption is not more than six cups.

Are You Needlessly Suffering Constipation?

Many people think that constipation is "one of those things" you must put up with. That the only thing you can do is take a purge or cathartic—and hope it doesn't come soon again. How foolish that is if you, like millions of others, have the ordinary kind of constipation that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet.

Kellogg's All-Bran is probably just what you need! This crisp, delicious cereal has the "bulk"-forming properties your intestines need to function "regularly"! It gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it — helps you get back to normal, easy elimination. Eat All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and help free yourself from constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

SPAGHETTI?

What's Happened To Yours, Mussolini?

GONE to feed Nazi soldiers? Something's wrong with that picture, Mussolini. Maybe you did start out with ideals, but you got into bad company.

We have spaghetti in America—plenty of it. We send some abroad to the United Nations. We also send great quantities of tomato juice, fruits, vegetables, meats . . . and still have enough left for the home front.

Yes, it's a job. We've never tried to feed half the world before and some equipment is lacking. Our food-canning industry is taxed to the limit. But we have the finest women in the world, Mussolini; they're fighting this war with kettles and spoons, pressure cookers and home-canning jars . . . preserving food at home, each for her own family. You see, it not only means a low food cost and a balanced diet—it means that commercially-canned foods can be loaded on hundreds of "food ships" for our fighting sons and brothers.

That's typical of America, Mussolini—this nation of weaklings. Come over and learn a lesson.

SOPHOMORE GOSSIP

Our Sophomore boys are showing great promise this year on the football field. Among them are Doug Palmer, who made the first team last year, Bill Coffin and Hank Stewart who also made the team last year.

The newcomers are: Ted Nichols, Bill Weatherbee, Richard Wilkins, Frances Peters, Johnny Irwin, Ray Wood, Richard Woods, and Dick Nielson.

On October 5, we were excused from classes at one thirty to organize and help with the very important scrap drive. First we had to go to a room in which our district was gathered; then a boy and a girl were chosen as chairman and co-chairman. Then all left the school with the idea of collecting all of the scrap in our own home, and help in collecting not more than one or two others. Every single street in the town will be campaigned and every one will be asked to gather all of their scrap.

After the opening of the hockey season, by our new coach, Miss Hayward, last week, a great many Sophomores have been seen running up and down the field. Probably a large number of these will also be seen playing in the first game with Melrose on October 13.

In our Sophomore Biology class we have a very good collection of insects. The very latest one is a beautiful specimen of a "Walking Stick" brought in by Amelia Morland.

JUNIOR CLASS

President: George Webber
Vice-Pres.: Jane Wilson
Secretary: Geerry Sullivan
Treasurer: Harold Call

A date for the first dance will be announced later.

HERE'S WHAT'S COOKIN'

Have you noticed the swell aquariums in the lab? William Britt is responsible for most of the curiosities.

Just because we aren't having an extensive sports program this year, I don't believe that our spirit should fall below the level of the previous years.

America's automotive service men are playing an important part in the nation's war effort. It is their job to "save the wheels that serve America."
SUPER CHEVROLET SERVICE

The Automotive Mechanic of Yesterday Is the VICTORY SERVICE MAN of Today

Help him to help you "SAVE THE WHEELS THAT SERVE AMERICA" by getting a skilled service check-up regularly

Take the word of millions: MORE PEOPLE GO TO CHEVROLET DEALERS FOR SERVICE than to any other dealer organization

Just how important the automotive mechanic's work is to the nation will be clear to all who consider the following facts*:

- Automobiles and trucks form the sole practicable means of transportation for war workers and war materials in many communities throughout America.
- In some sections, 78% to 100% of the workers drive by automobile to vital war plants.
- 2,314 U. S. cities, with a population of 12,524,000, depend on private cars for transportation; 54,000 communities depend entirely on motor vehicles.
- Six out of every ten farms use one car or more; 67% of farm car mileage is necessity driving.
- More than 65.2% of all war plants reporting in Michigan (a typical war production state) depend on trucks to haul their incoming and outgoing freight.
- Trucks haul nearly 100% of the milk supply of most large cities—and 58% of all livestock marketed in the U. S.
- Trucks are the sole transportation system serving our 54,000 communities not reached by railroads.

The automotive mechanic—the trained Chevrolet Victory Service Man—is the lifeguard of America's millions of cars and trucks. Help him to help you and America by getting a skilled service check-up at regular intervals.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY AGENTS COMING HERE THIS MONTH

Massachusetts Sate College, U. S. Department of Agriculture and Middlesex County Extension Service.
County Agent Work
19 Everett Street
Concord, Mass.

Wilmington Mirror
Wilmington, Mass.

Dear Editor:

Tires and gasoline are short. The Trustees of the Middlesex County Extension Service want to make certain the the farm and home people of the county are served as efficiently as possible under war conditions. For this reason, they have decided to try and carry on this fall and winter by working directly with eac htown on a definite schedule.

The schedule for the first three months, namely: October, November and December, is enclosed, showing the dates for your town and the other towns in your region, along with the Staff members who will be in your town each month. The plan is to establish a central place in each town where the agents may be reached meetings held, or a schedule arranged for farm and home visits.

The plan of the Trustees of appointing Town Directors will again be revived to direct the work in each town so as to give the best service possible to the people interested. During the month of October, these Directors will be appointed and local arrangements made.

Everyone wants to do his part in help win this war. Farmers have been doing their part. The Extension Service knows that all will cooperate, not only to save their own time and energy but the travel and time of the Extension Service agents in serving the people of the county. As the season advances, your suggestions and assistance in improving th eplan for this service will be appreciated.

Emergency calls to the Extension office will be taken care of as quickly as possible under the restrictions we have on travel. By team work all down the line, it is hoped we can all carry on and produce and conserve to the utmost to help the home front meet the war schedule.

Sincerely yours,

A. F. MacDaniell,
County Agricultural Agent.

The staff schedule for October will include the Messers. Erickson Hopkins, Law and Warren during November, Messers Hopkins Brown and Leighton and during December, Hopkins, Erickson, West and Agnew.

They will be in Wilmington on October 12, November 27 and December 7.

Peace Driving Will Cut Cars

Emphasizing the need for car conservation through pooling and "share-a-ride" plans, Mr. Nelson said that if the average American continues to operate his car today as he did in time of peace, some twenty million automobiles will be out of service within twelve to fifteen months. This would leave only approximately eight million cars in service by 1943.

IN "WAKE ISLAND" Paramount has shown what a war picture ought to be; the truth was so dramatic that there was no need to dress it up with a fancy plot—and praise goes to the writers, W. R. Burnett and Frank Butler, and to Director John Farrow for letting that plot be as slight as possible. Farrow directed it superbly, the members of the cast did a memorable job. Pretty good cast, incidentally, including Brian Donlevy, Walter Abel, Robert Preston, Macdonald Carey and Albert Dekker. Don't miss it!

of Lucille Ball's, with a crush on Victor Mature. During filming, her part was "fattened" three times, so that she finally had two musical numbers of her own, and a comedy romance that wasn't in the original script.

Iona Reed, who's a stunt woman as well as Claire Trevor's stand-in in "The Desperadoes," has ridden horses that cowpunchers wouldn't mount, leaped from high cliffs, risked her neck in dozens of ways—but she balked at an assignment the other day. The script called for Claire to smoke a cigar; Iona was told to do it, and said "No." She can't even smoke a cigarette!

Life masks taken directly from the faces of a group of stars, along with fashion sketches, original charcoal sketches of sets and other material used in preparing a film, will comprise a Traveling Educational exhibit soon to be sent on tour by MGM. Frances Parker, lecturer, will accompany it, and it will be displayed at universities, schools, civic and educational societies.

Freddie Bartholomew has bought himself a motorcycle, which he rides back and forth to Columbia for work in "Junior Army" . . . Wakefield Victory Village
Taking December Occupancy Now

Rentals for December occupancy in one of the attractive Wakefield Victory Village duplex houses are now being taken, the November quota is filled up.

One marvels at the attractiveness of these Garrison Colonial homes, built to resemble a single family home of true Old American type, but completely divided into two five room homes, separate entrances, furnaces, etc.

The landscape gardning is a great deal different from that found on many developments, much money has been spent with a reliable landscape gardner to lay out the shrubbery and shade trees on the lawns and sidewalks.

The Wakefield Village Trust at 804 Park square, Boston, offers a very attractive budget-proof investment.

This is how it works:

The purchase price is	$7,500.00
Paid by 25-yr. 1st mortgage	6,300
Paid by 30 months 2nd mortg.	600
Paid by Cash—only	600
Owner receives 2 monthly rents at $45.00	90.00

Total carrying for the first 30 months only is approximately $30.00 per month and thereafter during the term of the first mortgage, approximately 57.50

Net monthly cash profit..... $32.50

That is 66% on your cash investment and totals per year $390.00

In addition your monthly payments are automatically reducing the principal of the first mortgage at the average rate of 252.00

Total annual net profit $642.00

That is more than 100% each year on your cash investment, before depreciation and maintenance.

Materials for these houses were contracted for long before the prevailing acute shortage prevalent today. The houses are completely insulated are "honor-built" and of a quality of workmanship and material that has made Gilbert-Varker houses famous for a maximum of value at minimum of cost. The Gilbert-Verker Corporation, Construction Engineers, headed by Mr Boyce Gilbert, builders of Victory Village Duplex houses in Wakefield occupy a unique and leading place in the small house construction field in the Atlantic Seaoard States They have developed housing projects in Maryland, Pennsylvania Delaware, New Jersey, and Connecticut and locally in sections of Greater Boston including Revere, Waltham, Weymouth, Melrose, Roslindale, Squantum, Watertown, Natick, West Roxbury and Wakefield Mr. Gilbert has been in the housing and heavy construction field for many years and is regarded in the trade of effort or less the Dean of small house construction. Among his more prominent projects in Boston are the Ritz-Carlton, the Motor Mart Garage, the Sheraton, and some fifteen other of the larger office and economical buildings located in Boston. His organization, most of whom have been in his employ for fifteen years or more, constitute a group of specialists of unusual ability each in his own field and probably without parallel in New England.

Wakefield because of its scenic, municipal and other advantages has been one of the fastest-growing suburban towns in recent years. It is the shopping centre for a large area of surrounding towns. Every store has been enlarged or modernized in the past two years and six new business blocks have been built in the town. Wakefield has an unexcelled water supply from lake and underground system, with the only slow sand filteration system in Northern Greater Boston. Schools in modern buildings and highly rated in educational circles are within sight of Wakefield Victory Village.

Excellent and frequent transportation rate ever made by any Massachusetts town in the last 3 years, reduced $7150 making the present rate $32. The bonded debt of Wakefield will be nor existent in about three years.

One of the lowest electrical rates in all New England is another boast of the town.

Recreation ground could best describe the Town of Wakefield Two of the most beautiful lakes, make a picturesque scene. It also has the largest municipal park system in Eastern Massachusetts Some of the sports of the Town include bathing, canoeing, yachting motor boating on the famous Lake Quannapowitt. Over three hundred new homes have been built in Wakefield during the past three years.

Wakefield Victory Village duplex houses are to be complete in every detail including a complete insulation for all walls and ceilings Each unit has five rooms, with economical coal heaters electric kitchen range They will be sold on a most unusual budget 25 year amortization plan. These houses are in the so-called "Defense Area". They constitute a contribution to our Government's effort to provide adequate housing for Defense workers and a purchaser of one or more of these houses is in turn, contributing to the war effort, and at the same time insuring for himself a high return upon the investment he has made. The factor of a hedge against possible inflation or rising prices is also to be considered. Certainly there is no more conservative way to protect the value of your capital than by investment in well located well constructed, income bearing real estate. In selecting Wakefield as the location for Victory Village Duplex houses we were careful to consider the long range value of the site from the standpoint of continuing rental demand during the years to come. The unprecedented demand for housing insures immediate occupancy of these houses, but it is the after-the-war demand which should guide you in making real estate investments. On accepting applications for occupancy Nov 1 families of workers who have to commute the longest distances to their jobs will be given preference. Mr. Corbiere said.

Leavens, Medford's new furniture store on the Fellsway in Wellington, has completely furnished one of the model homes at the Wakefield Victory Village. Visitors will be delighted with the comfortable, smart, living room; the attractive small dinning room and two lovely bed rooms, one in mahogany and one in maple. A strict budget has been adhered to in planning all the furnishings so that defense families can easily afford to furnish their homes similarly with Leavens furniture. All the furniture shown in Wakefield Victory Village may be obtained at Leavens in Medford or at the other Leavens stores in Boston, Waltham and Quincy

Here are the official air raid warning rules which will be observed in Wilmington during future air raids. The MIRROR suggests that these be clipped and saved for future reference.

Effective immediately, the following code of audible alarm signals for blackouts and air-raid alerts will be established in all cities and towns in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Army Strives for Right Man on Right Spot

Fighting, Efficient Yanks Is First Aim of Personnel Officers

Sorting out and analyzing the occupational skills, hobbies, education and aptitudes of every man who enters the army and fitting him into an assignment where he can make his greatest contribution to the war effort is the job of more than 6,000 skilled personnel officers and men who were carefully selected and trained by the adjutant general's office of the war department and who are engaged in this most important of all personnel work in nearly every corner of the globe.

Unlike material, personnel is never static—it is always changing. A man entering the service today and classified as a mechanic or a potential machine gunner may next month or several months later display aptitudes which may make him a potential anti-aircraft gunner, a Diesel engine mechanic, a tank commander or an officer candidate.

The right man in the right place—that's the idea. But the important purpose of the army's training program is to develop fighting soldiers such as this one: Lieut. James A. Harden, "Bayonet Expert of the 31st Division."

Because some men fail to measure up to the first estimate of their abilities, and others demonstrate abilities far beyond anything that their civilian experience would indicate, the work of the classification and assignment officer has only begun, when at the reception center the first duty or training assignment is recommended.

Various Test 'Sieves.'

Actual requirements of the various arms and services to provide filler and loss replacements for existing and new units are known and set up in requirement and replacement rate tables by the many civilian occupational categories that are required to make up our army and are furnished service command commanders in accordance with the selective service procurement allotment quota of each service command and also in accordance with the occurrence rate of procurement of each type of civilian occupation in each service command which experience has indicated. This provides the first sieve through which men are put when they enter the service.

A second is given them when they arrive at replacement training centers of the various arms and services. Here, their records of the interview and test grades attained are reviewed and they are placed in the type of training within their arm or service of assignment where it is believed they will do their best work.

It will be seen from this that while the objective of initial classification is to recommend a man for duty or training in an army job for which his civilian experience indicates he is best fitted, there are several contributing factors which may result in his being assigned to a duty entirely foreign, to his mind, to any experience he may have had. They include: a surplus of civilian occupations above army requirements; many civilian jobs having no army counterpart; a personnel history indicating leadership potentialities which the man himself possibly did not realize.

At the Reception Center.

Here classification and assignment begin. Here all men are interviewed and initially classified. Here their basic classification form is filled out. This card accompanies every man throughout his army career, and will be used in helping to find a job for him when he returns to civilian life. It summarizes his personal history, schooling, work experience, leadership ability, interests, hobbies, foreign languages, and previous military, ROTC or CCC experience. Additions and changes are made when necessary, insuring an up-to-date record of information throughout the man's service.

The first phase of classification is testing. Every man receives the army general classification test, which provides an index of his general ability to learn his duties. The score on this test and the corresponding army grade are recorded on the qualification card before the man is interviewed. The mechanical aptitude test is given to all recruits who can read and write English. The test has questions on pattern-picture matching, shop mechanics, and mechanical movements, comprehension, and information.

The second phase of initial classification is the interview. The interviewer is skilled in questioning, in drawing out desired information, and in recording it accurately.

After the Interview.

When the interview is over, the qualification card is checked for completeness, accuracy, and legibility. It is then referred to the classifier, who checks the man's civilian occupations and on the basis of the information on the card recommends his initial duty or training assignment either to a replacement training center or to a unit. This recommended assignment is not necessarily the man's main or even second-best civilian occupation, nor is determined on the basis of a complete analysis of each individual which includes his occupation, education, hobbies, previous military training, intelligence, leadership, and other pertinent factors.

It is the practice to distribute men of various levels of educational and mental ability equally among the different arms and services so that the average level is equalized in all arms and services.

At Replacement Training Center.

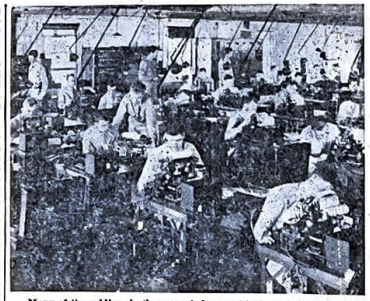
Here, incoming trainees are assigned to the type of training which they may most readily absorb. The particular needs of the service, however, may make it impossible to assign every man to the specific type of training for which he was first recommended.

The first task is to make certain that each man's training will be in accord with his aptitudes, interests and experience. Various means are employed to insure training only qualified personnel. When the experience data on the soldier's qualification card are questionable, the soldier is re-interviewed; and if his particular ability is still uncertain, he receives a trade test for that field.

In the final matching of men and jobs, other factors beside the test scores and work experience are carefully considered. Full utilization is made of leadership, age, previous military experience, and any other experience with predictive value.

If Progress Isn't Satisfactory.

While the men are receiving these varied types of training at the Replacement Training center, the classification and assignment officer is continually informed about their progress so that any who are not progressing satisfactorily may be reclassified and reassigned to a different type of training.



Many of the soldiers in the army today are highly trained technicians. Many of them, their technical "talents" being discovered by various tests after induction, are receiving such training as these young men who are learning the detail assembly of teletype machines, and how to remedy any defects found in them.

This is especially important in connection with the training of specialists, since these schools have limited space facilities and can be used to train only those men best qualified for the instruction. The classification officer is also kept informed when men in the Special Training units are ready to return to regular training, so that they may be transferred promptly.

Near the completion of their training, all enlisted men are reported to the adjutant general by the specification serial number of the military occupational specialty in which they will be qualified for assignment to a unit. The adjutant general then issues transfer orders for these men to report to various units and installations for which requisitions exist.

At units, replacements are assigned to duties on the basis of the information on their qualification cards.

For various reasons, men may often be reclassified. A specialist gains new skills in the process of training, a soldier of long service can no longer compete physically with younger men, a conscientious objector requests in writing to be assigned to a combat unit, or an enlisted man finds it difficult, because of physical deficiency or emotional instability, to adjust himself to an assignment.

Reassignments are also made to balance the available skills and mental abilities within the units and through the service. Unit commanders report shortages and any oversupply of military specialists so that transfers may be made to balance skills throughout the parent unit and the army.

Intensive training, hard work, good food—and plenty of it, such is what goes into the daily life of each and every one of Uncle Sam's soldiers. The big grin on this sergeant's face indicates that he's satisfied with what is on his tray.

Throughout the service, the aim of classification is not mere cataloguing of men, but efficient use of these men according to their qualifications and the needs of the army.

Assigned to the work of personnel classification and assignment are skilled commissioned and enlisted specialists designated as Personnel Technicians and Personnel Consultants.

Personnel Specialists.

The personnel technician is a classification officer charged with the administration of classification procedures and policies in the unit or installation to which he may be assigned. He must have had technical training and experience in personnel administration and must demonstrate organizing ability. With him rests responsibility for the administration of Classification Tests given to all enlisted men and for giving aptitude and individual tests when necessary.

He has on his staff the Personnel Consultant and enlisted men, also classified as Personnel Technicians, who help to maintain the smooth and efficient functioning of the classification program.

Through such classification and assignment, the army of the United States is endeavoring to use available manpower with one end only one object in view—the placement of each man in a job or duty where his strength, vigor, skill, aptitudes and intelligence may be utilized to strike the most telling blow against the enemies of our country.

Yanks Taught Language of Land Where They Are Stationed

American troops embarking for a land where a foreign language is spoken will be taught an elementary speaking knowledge of that language through a new and simplified method of instruction featuring the use of phonograph records, it was announced by the war department.

The records are used in conjunction with reference pamphlets containing instructions in pronunciation and a glossary containing further information on the language.

Designed to teach the soldier essential and useful spoken phrases of the language, sufficient to enable him to understand and be understood in general terms of conversation, the army method of instruction was developed by the Education branch of the Special Service division, Services of Supply.

It is based on using the records to give the listener the proper sounds of the phrases in the foreign language and an opportunity to hear them repeated, together with co-ordinated reference booklets which represent these phrases.

Dr. Henry Lee Smith, former instructor of English at Brown university, Providence, R. I., and director of the radio program, "Where Are You From?" is in charge.

He points out that although the procedure is based on scientific analysis of principles of phonetics and phonemics, it is not intended as a basic conversational study of the foreign language. It was evolved only as an expedient for quickly and easily instructing American troops.

The records are transcribed with such elementary and useful expressions and phrases as "Good Day," "Where is a restaurant?" and "How much does this cost?" These are announced in English and repeated in the foreign language by a native speaker of the language. Each phrase is repeated twice to emphasize its proper pronunciation.

The references used in the language-teaching plan are contained in special guide booklets of the foreign land which also describe its geography, history and customs.

It is planned to supply every troop unit with a set of foreign language recordings upon leaving for a destination where a foreign language is spoken.

It is estimated that after six or seven hearings of the records and a short period of applied study of the references, the average soldier should have memorized sufficient phrases to provide him with an adequate speaking vocabulary for his needs.

The advantages of being able to speak and understand the language of the land should prove not only a convenience to American soldiers, but through easier communication with each other, should tend to create closer co-operation and goodwill between them and the natives of the land.

The record and reference instruction method is adaptable to any language and dialect. Through its application and study, one could readily learn to converse in Navaho, Hottentot, or Eskimo.

These Russian army officers, here on an inspection tour, are learning how the U. S. army is developing to perfection its training and maintenance program, besides making the best use of top-ranking fighting equipment.

Colorful Velveteen Is Smart For 'Dating' or Classroom

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS a triumphant program that fashion seers are predicting for velveteen this fall and winter. Enchanting colors, sturdy texture, the dress-up appearance it always makes, together with its wearableness from the utilitarian standpoint; its adaptability to versatile styling for everyone from tiny tots to fashion-minded grownups, the fact that it is not affected by the priority rulings, and many more of its virtues that might be cited, all conspire to put velveteen in the fabric realm today.

The wardrobe that does not make a goodly showing of gay and handsome velveteen fashions this fall and winter will be the exception rather than the rule. So velveteen-conscious have style creators become they are vieing with each other to see who can turn out the most attractive velveteen fashions. Nor does their enthusiasm end with the use of velveteen for dresses, coats and suits, for velveteen is also playing a stellar role in the accessory field.

There's a big thrill awaiting you in the stunning accessory ensembles which milliners are displaying with utmost pride. For a grand and glorious uplift to your fall suit or coat you'll find that a hat and bag two-some will come nothing short of proving ideal. These velveteen sets are to be had in lush colors that carry flattery to the 'nth degree. You can get a beret and underarm bag made of velveteen or a chic "padre" hat over the brim of which sweeps a colorful pheasant feather. Later you will be seeing muff, bag and hat threesomes, so be on the lookout for these beguiling velveteen fantasies.

The styles pictured are utterly convincing as to the charm and the [illegible] which makes velveteen one of the most to be desired fabrics that fashion has to offer this season.

There is an important style message in the dress to the left in the group illustrated above in that it is made of check-and-double-check velveteen. It's a lovable gown to wear to "dates" and really as practical to wear to class. This handsome check-printed velveteen does honor to the cotton textile theme, for that's what it is, one of those stunning cotton materials which are a persuasive argument in favor of adopting smart cottons for winter and fall as well as spring and summer wear.

This classic shirtwaist model achieves a new look with its peplop skirt that brings discreet and flattering fullness to the fore. Unusual blouse fastenings clip on and off like the buttons on a military uniform. You can vision this dress in rich autumn green or brown or the new fuchsia tone, but there's no end to the colors available.

Shown to the right in the above picture is a swank and practical "date" costume made of spruce green velveteen, with the new hipbone jacket length. The scallop treatment is most beguiling. Be it said also of this costume, as well as its two companion fashions, that they have been made to conform to the government fabric-saving program in every detail as issued direct from the Office of War Information. For downright practicality and the utmost chic and charm, here is a costume that will measure up perfectly to every requirement.

Another velveteen charmer is centered in the above illustration. It is just the sort that carries college girl appeal with its dirndl-front skirt, pockets and studded belt that is so smartly colorful. Speaking of school-girl fashions, there is nothing smarter or more practical than a velveteen jumper dress with which you can wear a different blouse every day if you so choose. Bright red velveteen is a first selection, or the new purple.

Style Notes

The surplice sweater is a smart new item.

Color is the big news in fall fashion realms.

Silhouettes in hats are exciting and definitely new.

Low, square necklines are newer than heart shapes.

Fur-trimmed tuxedo fronts are "tops" in the coat realm.

The fur coat that is trimmed with contrasting fur is high fashion.

Wash dresses and suits that don't look it lead for summer-to-fall wear.

Two Coat Types Vie For Style Honors

Chesterfield Competes With Tuxedo.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Everybody is talking about the new furred tuxedo fronts. Coats with these long revers are so outstanding their style supremacy might go unchallenged were it not for the very smart Chesterfield types that are definitely new. The rivalry between these two coat fashions is going on in a close-count race.

Favorite furs used for the long tuxedo revers include muskrat, beaver, skunk and skunk-dyed opossum, and in the junior class leopard and other spotted pelts are wanted. Alaska seal is also a favorite. A new touch given to some of the clevcrest tuxedos is that the fur revers are finished off at the throat with loops that achieve huge bow effects that are very flattering.

The swank Chesterfield coats stage a bit of drama in that they are styled man-fashion and are modishly velvet-collared. To add to their striking appearance you are supposed to wear a hat done in velvet matched to the collar. These sturdily built coats of tweed are made to go over everything from suits to party frocks.

The younger set is all in a flutter over the new "jewel tone" coats. These are, for the most part, of deep-napped fabric (shaggy effects are the rage) and they are interlined with aralac, which is a milk-fiber product that is as warm as wool and as light as fleecy down. Jeep coats come in colors galore and the gay 'teen-age girls find it as difficult as the rest of the fair sex to decide between the new reds and the camel-tan shades, or the lovely blond beiges and grays. Gray blues and royal blues are good style, too.

Perhaps the most significant news is about the new fall coat styles. Casual and utility types frankly borrow many of their lines and details from men's overcoats. Wolfen's overcoats now in fashion are made for the most part of tweeds, woolens and various fiber blends that astonish one with their handsome appearance together with the promise they give of durability.

Dress coats have a indylikeness about them that is very attractive, and they stress slenderized silhouettes, self-tie fastenings, and quite much of the new decorative frog closings.

No Wool Here

Wool priorities won't affect this new coat for the college-bound girl this fall. Introduced at one of Chicago's State street fashion shows, the coat of cotton pile has all the appearance, warmth and wearing qualities of its woolen predecessors. The collar and front panel are bright green wool, a note repeated in the striped "fisherman's cap."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK.—Lieut. Gen. Bernard Law Montgomery, as commander of Britain's Eighth army, is in supreme command of Allied forces in Egypt, constituting Nazi Field Marshal Rommel's second major bid for the valley of the Nile. While General Montgomery won the DSO in World War I, he is a newcomer to headlines or citations in this war, having been a divisional commander in Palestine.

He is known as a cautious, reticent officer, highly esteemed in Downing street, according to meager accounts available here, for his tact and skill in allaying political strife in Palestine and in neutralizing among the Arabs the clamor for a Jewish army to fight with the Allies.

On November 18 of last year, there was an army shakeup in which General Montgomery succeeded Lieut. Col. Bernard C. Paget as chief of the Southeastern command. He is only 53 years old and at the time of this transfer British newspapers noted with satisfaction that the army was calling on its "younger men."

In the years between the big wars, he was busy with staff work, said to be one of the keenest students of traditional warfare, and became a divisional commander with the start of this war. He assumed command of the Eighth army August 13. He is slight of person and sharp-featured, rarely on record with a definite commitment and never has been known to go off the deep end or get out on a limb.

Born the son of the Rt. Rev. H. H. Montgomery, he entered the army in 1908, and fought through World War I as a battalion major.

He was then the first and only Chinese woman to hold the degree doctor of laws, and is today Mme. Sourmay Tcheng Wei, wife of China's new ambassador to Washington, Dr. Wei Tao-ming. Slender, smartly dressed, speaking several languages fluently and correctly, she takes rank with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and other cultured and brilliant Chinese women who have first come to the attention of this country in the war years.

AT THE Versailles Peace conference, a pretty Chinese girl, one of the secretaries of the Chinese delegation, made an earnest plea to A 'Mrs. Miniver' the conference. The Who's Citizen of urged it not China and World to accede to demands of Shantung to Japan, insisting, almost tearfully, that this would open the way for Japanese aggression that would some day "destroy the peace of the world."

She must be considered a Chinese Mrs. Miniver, who could discuss bombs from first-hand knowledge at an embassy tea party. She not only has dodged them but has used them.

It was in the revolution that established the Chinese republic that this modish little lady was a bomb-thrower. Her father was a high official of the Manchu government. She stepped across ancient lines of class and tradition to fight with the young Chinese, and last special assignment was transporting and distributing bombs. Thus aiding the China to blast its way into the modern world, she helped form the new government and then, realizing that she and China needed modern intellectual equipment, she went to Paris and took her law degree at the Sorbonne. This, she later explained, was due to her deep conviction that any enlightened person of today should be a citizen of the world as well as of her own country. Now years she considers herself a citizen of the world.

There might be an idea there—an elite of world citizenry, after the war, recruited by rigorous tests of humane intelligence, forming a nucleus of world co-operation, without recreance to any given sovereignty.

Again, like the Minivers, Mme. Wei and her husband saw their house bombed piecemeal, and dodged behind trees and rocks in the woods to avoid the machine gun bullets of the Japanese bombers.
